President's Welcome

2026 is CPRE's centenary year!

We look back on many successful interventions and campaigns which have influenced or changed opinion; we have also prevented or lessened some plans and proposals very damaging to our Hertfordshire countryside. Many visitors today comment on how beautiful this is.

The support and action by CPRE was only possible with a succession of knowledgeable and active people in our office who work on the constant stream of inappropriate planning proposals and applications.

The challenges in protecting Hertfordshire's countryside are greater now than ever. The government's recently introduced policy on 'grey belt' is causing untold damage to the Green Belt (which comprises about half of Hertfordshire's land area) and we are campaigning for this policy to be reversed.

We also identify and insist that Brownfield sites should be developed first, and that renewable energy should be generated from solar panels on rooftops rather than taking valuable farmland out of food production.

We have strong relationships with our local MPs but continue to rely on the support from you our members with your local voices and experience.

Do come along and bring your friends to our special centenary event at St Paul's Walden Bury on 5th July. Book tickets in advance via the website, and enjoy the entertainments and a beautiful piece of unspoilt Hertfordshire countryside which is what we are all fighting for.

Centenary AGM & Countryside Day - Saturday 3rd October 2026, 10.00am

We are delighted to be holding our Annual General Meeting in the Riding Stables at Hatfield House. After the AGM, there will be a light lunch and refreshments followed by CPRE Hertfordshire's Countryside Day.

At this year's event, bestselling local author Freya North will be delivering a talk about her move from an urban lifestyle in London to her life managing a farm in Hertfordshire, and how the countryside has shaped her writing.

In addition, there will be an interactive session with Elena Mannion, local publisher and author, known for her bestselling children's book, The Happy Hedgerow. She will be discussing the importance of our hedgerow eco systems with our Hedgerow Heroes Project Officer James Lunt, with lots of hedgerow activities for the children!

Hatfield House will also be opening up the grounds for you to explore at your leisure, and we'll be hosting a variety of local vendors and other environmental charities for you to browse.

Everyone is welcome, so come celebrate National CPRE's centenary with our FREE day out - tickets are first come first served. Please email: office@cpreherts.org.uk to secure your space, or book your tickets online via our website.

A View from the Chair

This has been another full and successful year, the details of which are covered in greater detail by our Chief Executive, Abby, and her team.

I feel privileged to be part of that team. This year CPRE, nationally, celebrates its centenary and CPRE Hertfordshire will be doing so in 2028. There is much to celebrate not least the establishing of the Green Belt, of the national parks, the stopping of ribbon development, the reinstating of dark skies - the list goes on.

Without us and the vision, courage and tenacity of our many volunteers and supporting staff, and of that generation which founded CPRE all those years ago, we would not enjoy the largely underdeveloped beauty that is still on our doorsteps across England today.

However, our in-tray is always full. Secretaries of State come and go with great regularity. They enter office usually unfamiliar with their brief believing that the choice is between a rural idyll and plenty of development. They leave office understanding our guiding mantra, the right development in the right place. We then start the process all over again with their successor.

Despite this frustration we continue to report achievements across a number of fronts.

The biggest single challenge is the Government's attempt to create a new concept, the grey belt, but with no guidance on what it means other than to act as a convenient excuse to wave through hitherto rejected developments and so sacrifice the Green Belt which has served us so well for so long. And now? The prospect of ill-conceived and intrusive developments to the detriment of beautiful countryside on our doorstep, readily accessible, supplying food and mollifying the soul with its incomparable and intoxicating beauty. We can be proud that we initiated a national petition to challenge Government to clarify the definition of grey belt and although we secured over 42,000 signatures, forcing the Government to respond, we needed more in order to initiate a debate in Parliament. At least MPs and others now have a clearer understanding of the issues at stake.

We have also played a major part in the recent joint report with London Green Belt Council again detailing the dangers of grey belt. This research will become a crucial document in our debates and ongoing endeavours.

There is a fundamental fallacy at the heart of the housing debate. The argument of many is that more houses mean cheaper ones. This simply is not the case. It is the way our housing is financed and the ever-increasing cost of labour and materials that means houses will remain beyond the reach of many. And there are over 1m homes with planning permission that have not been built, and space for about the same number of homes on identified brownfield sites, more than sufficient to meet current needs.

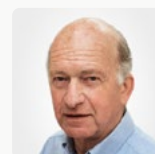

We also promote as well as protect the countryside. We revised our walks in all parts of the county and planted over 2550 metres of hedgerow. Two examples from many.

I never cease to be amazed at how few know about CPRE with its long list of achievements or even know the countryside on their doorsteps. It means we don't always have a local population aware of the damage a proposed development will do to their locality. And then there is the flippant oft quoted comment made against us, that we are anti-development. We are not. We want disciplined debate and recognition of the value of our guiding spirit of the right development in the right place.

This is the only way we can accommodate the apparent conundrum of either no development or inappropriate development plonked anywhere.

Alas we will be saying goodbye to Abby at the end of June as she goes to another Chief Executive position in the not-for-profit sector after 2.5 years serving us so well. She has made a huge contribution, and it is beholden on us to honour and enhance it!

Peter Waine
Chairman

A Message from our Chief Executive

As I reflect on the past year at CPRE Hertfordshire, I am extremely proud of the achievements we have made in that time to fulfil our mission to protect, promote and enhance the countryside against a challenging political and economic landscape. Our year in numbers on page 10, demonstrates the hard work and tenacity of our staff, volunteers and supporters.

We have continued to gain influence at a national level, through the launch of our petition calling on the Government to change the grey belt definition in the National Planning Policy Framework which resulted in over 42,000 signatures nationwide, an article in the Daily Telegraph and a response from the Government. And through doing so increasingly gaining engagement from our local MPs in support of protection of the Green Belt notably Sir Oliver Dowden and Victoria Collins.

Our joint report with the London Green Belt Council revealing the devastating impact of ‘grey belt’ published in April saw national media coverage, raising awareness of our charity and our mission to wider audiences. Our recent ‘Don’t let our green belt be rebranded grey’ video launched across social media to highlight the onslaught of planning applications citing ‘grey belt’ in the Green Belt has achieved over 7,000 views online in just two months and helped us grow our supporter base. And overall, our “Save Our Green Belt” campaign received over 3,800 website visitors, conveying the importance of our campaigning work in raising awareness of the threat to our green spaces.

Having secured funding, our first ever Hedgerow Heroes community project to enhance the countryside launched last autumn and has been a huge success, attracting many new volunteers to the charity and engaging many of our existing volunteers with outdoor volunteering opportunities. Over 2,550 metres of hedgerow were planted over the course of six months - equivalent to approximately 12,000 individual plants - with the aim to support biodiversity, help mitigate climate change and protect our landscapes. We hope to continue the project this coming autumn, with further hedgerow restoration and expansion into sites in south and west Hertfordshire.

Through our Tesco Stronger Starts funding, we were able to run our Children’s Art Competition again last year with over 150 schools participating, connecting children with the importance of the countryside around them. This year we hope to see many entries from children in our Centenary Photography Competition. Last autumn our AGM and Countryside Day held at Knebworth House attracted over 150 people, with talks from Mary Ann Ochota, National CPRE’s President, and Nic Wilson, Guardian Country Diarist and author of Land Beneath the Waves. We hope to see as many of our members as possible at our Special Centenary AGM and Countryside Day this year at Hatfield House on Saturday 3rd October and at our special Centenary Musical Event and Open Gardens at St Pauls Walden Bury on 5th July.

And finally, a personal thank you from me as this will be my last Annual Review here at CPRE Hertfordshire as I move to a new Chief Executive role at a national environmental charity. I want to thank all our members, volunteers and staff for their support during my time here. As you can see from this year’s achievements highlighted above, your generosity and dedication continue to make a huge difference to our mission, and we simply couldn’t do it without you.

The Year in Planning

Last year at this time I wrote about a ‘tumultuous’ year in planning and felt on reflection that perhaps I was being a little extreme. Sitting down to write this year’s review, it is clear that the ‘tumult’ continues unabated and the Government is showing no sign of regarding planning anything other than an unnecessary constraint on its development activities.

We have been inundated with documents, consultations and statements from the Government, and the most recent was a consultation on a revised National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) which is of course the Bible for local government planners, providing the national policy and guidance which they must follow. The draft proposed NPPF is as damaging as we imagined it would be and we have responded by concentrating on key points as opposed to trying to answer their 225 questions, many of which required a general agreement with their approach which is clearly difficult for us!

The national CPRE office took a similar approach but the revised NPPF is only one part of a general attack on both planning and regulation generally. This could be an increasingly divisive area for the Government as it broadens significantly the potential opposition to include wider environmental groups in the anti camp.

The Planning and Infrastructure Bill has now become law and there is growing concern that the Government attacks are widening to include the regulatory agencies; principally Natural England and the Environment Agency, with even suggestion of a merger of the two organisations. They are both starved of resources and paradoxically being given greater responsibilities whilst under threat.

Over the last year it is fair to say that the main challenge continues to be the introduction of grey belt which has effectively removed all protection for the Green Belt. Our joint report with the London Green Belt Council (“Green Belt is not grey belt” available on our CPRE Herts website) lays out the figures and describes the existential threat to the countryside, which is especially severe in Hertfordshire.

The joint report has been well received and we will continue to promote its message vigorously. We are leading CPRE nationally on this topic and national office is going to do more on the subject later in the year.

The story on Local Plans in the County also continues to be unsettled if not chaotic. Dacorum and St Albans finished their Examinations in Public recently and St Albans has received a Main Modifications report. Very recently we have also seen Welwyn Hatfield, Three Rivers, Hertsmere, North Herts and East Herts, together with Watford and Stevenage, start either reviews of their Local Plans or indicate that they will be starting afresh.

This adds a whole new level of uncertainty into the planning system as of course all these local authorities will be wound up in the forthcoming local government reorganisation.

A particular example of the turmoil is the to-ing and fro-ing over the Three Rivers Local Plan with the District Council taking a firm line on Green Belt protection and the Government deciding to make an example of the Council by directing them to increase the number of Green Belt housing sites in their Local Plan. This is despite Ministers saying publicly and frequently that local authorities are responsible for their local plan preparation. It’s another example of dishonesty (like grey belt) and many are watching to see how awareness grows to the threats to our countryside.

A further example is the publication by Hertsmere Borough Council of another Regulation 18 consultation document with a pro-development approach indistinguishable from the previous administration’s which attracted a record breaking public response. In fact it is more dangerous because it has full Government backing and the Council leadership is being very direct about promoting housing and economic development.

We continue to respond to all our County Local Plan consultations and it is clear that we will need to challenge the whole approach being adopted by councils who are having to follow Government direction on housing numbers and commercial developments like data centres and solar installations which are devastating the countryside. The irony of the situation is that much of the promotion of sites on protected land is unnecessary.

There is planning permission for over a million houses which have not been built, or even started, and space for about 1.4m dwellings on brownfield sites all over the country. And these figures exclude all the existing empty homes in our towns and cities that could be made available for new occupants.

With regard to our regular and consistent responses on planning applications and contributions to planning appeals we have been particularly active on Green Belt applications because they are most affected by the introduction of grey belt. Specifically, we have responded to 70 of these applications in the last year, most of them for major developments, and we helped defend the countryside at three major planning appeal inquiries.

Bringing us right up to date, we have been involved in the Bloor Homes application for 900 dwellings south of Potters Bar. This was unexpectedly refused permission by Hertsmere's Planning Committee; the developer appealed, and we supported local community groups opposing the development. With the appeal date set, the Council at the last minute decided not to defend the appeal, despite its own Planning Committee previously refusing permission.

This type of unacceptable behaviour is likely to become more prevalent in the future and just underlines how important it is that we continue to challenge both local and national government when they discount the importance of the open countryside to local communities as well the local economy and agriculture. The need for CPRE is greater than ever and in our centenary year, as well as celebrating past successes, we are having to re-argue fundamentally the case for our highly valued and valuable countryside.

Hedgerow Success!

CPRE Hertfordshire's Hedgerow Heroes project has demonstrated how practical conservation work can bring lasting benefits for wildlife, landscapes and local communities alike. Over the 2025/26 planting season, the project exceeded expectations, delivering new hedgerows across the Hertfordshire countryside while engaging volunteers of all ages and backgrounds in hands-on environmental action. The initiative has become an inspiring example of how local people can work together to restore nature and strengthen connections within the countryside.

The project originally set out to plant 2.1 kilometres of new hedgerow across several sites, such as Woodhall estate and Lannock Farm, with a strong focus on supporting biodiversity, improving habitat connectivity and involving the wider community in traditional countryside skills. Working in partnership with Herts and Middlesex Butterfly Conservation, the project prioritised planting a rich diversity of native species that would benefit threatened butterflies, moths and pollinators. Species such as spindle, barberry, elm, guelder rose and alder buckthorn were included alongside more traditional hedge plants like hawthorn, helping to create resilient and wildlife-rich corridors to connect up separate populations.

planting sessions throughout the winter months. Volunteers included local residents, families, students from Capel Manor College as well as local schools, members of community organisations and companies on team building days. Despite difficult winter weather conditions, volunteers worked tirelessly to prepare sites, plant whips, install guards and spread mulch to give the young hedges the best possible start.

The project has provided meaningful opportunities for people to reconnect with nature and each other. Volunteers frequently commented on the enjoyment and sense of purpose they gained from taking part, with many expressing pride in contributing to a lasting environmental legacy for future generations. The project successfully brought together people from a wide range of backgrounds and age groups, demonstrating that conservation work can be both accessible and deeply rewarding for everyone.

Although the winter planting season has now ended, the work continues. CPRE Hertfordshire will focus on maintaining and monitoring the new hedgerows through activities such as mulching, irrigation and planting understory species. Wildlife surveys, including bat, botanical and invertebrate monitoring, are also planned in partnership with specialists to establish baseline data and measure the long-term ecological impact of the project. There have also been several talks with different organisations to raise awareness of the project, and more are planned.

By the close of the planting season, the project had surpassed its original target significantly, with an impressive 2,550 metres of hedgerow planted — equivalent to approximately 12,000 individual plants. This achievement was made possible through the dedication of around 150 volunteers who joined

Our Year in Numbers

Enhancing Hertfordshire's Countryside

We planted over 2,500 metres of hedgerows across Hertfordshire involving over 150 volunteers from across the community in support of our national hedgerows target to support biodiversity, reduce climate change and restore natural landscapes.

Promoting the Benefits of the Countryside

CPRE Hertfordshire's supporters have grown by 29% via e-newsletter sign ups since the last annual review.

Promoting Planning Policies that Make the Best Use of Land

We've met with local MPs, community groups and town and parish councils to advise on how to make the best use of land including brownfield regeneration, Hertfordshire's empty homes, and unimplemented consents.

Supporting Communities to Have their Say

We have engaged with 135 individuals through our Lunch and Learn events on how to have their say on local developments. There were nearly 5,000 downloads of resource documents to support local voices from our website, up 14% on the previous year.

Supporting our Charity to Grow

We've increased the number of volunteers by 157% in 2025 vs 2024.

Protecting Hertfordshire's Green Belt and Countryside

16,083 planning applications across Hertfordshire were screened and we submitted comments against 67 of the most damaging proposals, up from 50 in 2024. We've defended against 55 grey belt applications covering 1,086 hectares of countryside and proposing 9,339 dwellings plus 8 solar farms, 2 data centres and 1 standalone BESS.

Celebrating our Successes

We welcomed over 150 supporters to our AGM and Countryside Day in 2025 at Knebworth House at which we were able to update attendees on the state of play in Hertfordshire along with our forthcoming projects.

Connecting Children

Over 150 children took part in our Children's Art Competition 2025.

Treasurers Report

Year ended 31st December 2025

In 2025, the charity had net expenditure of £60,138 (2024 net income £103,658). The revaluation of investments was £19,632 loss (2024 £6,764 gain), giving a net decrease in funds of £79,770 (2024 net increase £110,422).

Income

The total income for 2025 was £84,308 (2024 £201,373) including legacy income of £18,733 (2024 £140,500). 'Donations' includes donation income £7,084 (2024 £15,764) and grant income, mainly Hedgerow Heroes, £17,167 (2024 £750).

Expenditure

Total expenditure for 2025 was £144,446. This was higher than 2024 although broadly in line with budget. Planning consultancy fees were £7,678 and hedgerow planting costs were £12,116 (both nil in 2024).

Funds

As at 31 December 2025, total funds amounted to £568,170 (2024 £647,940). All are unrestricted.

Reserves

The Trustees approved a reserves policy in 2021. This considered and documented how the Charity would utilise unrestricted funds, including for a period of several years where the Charity reports net expenditure in the year.

Outlook

The Charity will continue with its activities in line with the Three-Year Strategic Plan and Annual Operating Plan. Costs will be monitored against the annual budget agreed by the Trustees.

Chalk Stream Reflections

£11.99

In 2020, former CPRE Hertfordshire Planning Manager Tim Hagyard set out to walk the entire length of each of Hertfordshire’s chalk streams. These globally-rare and precious waterways, and the wildlife habitats that they support, are under tremendous pressure from increasing abstraction and pollution. Tim wanted to explore the health of these rivers and enjoy their beauty. The book is enjoyable and educational but with a serious message and Tim weaves his personal reflections and recommendations into vivid descriptions of his experiences during the walk.

Heartwood Butterflies

This is a wonderful guidebook to 30 species of butterfly found at Heartwood Forest and throughout Hertfordshire. For each species, there are lots of photographs and information about identification, lifecycle, frequency and distribution. The book is a high-quality paperback, 46 pages, published in 2020. Produced by the Heartwood Monitoring Group.

Children’s Nature Books

Charming children’s books by local author Elena Mannion, with detailed full colour illustrations by Erin Brown. They cover important conservation themes and are suitable for children aged 4+.

‘Old Oak & Little Acorn’ and ‘Old Oak and the Wild Flowers’ £12.99. ‘The Happy Hedgerow’ £10.99

Walking the Lea Valley Walk

The Lea Valley Walk, part of the widely-acclaimed Cicerone series of walking books. The Lea is Hertfordshire’s principal river, flowing from its source at Legrave near Luton through much of the county before reaching the Thames. The Lea Valley Walk covers 53½ miles and was formally opened in 1993.

The Cicerone guide (third edition published in 2015) is full of information about the river and its valley, and is the essential companion for walkers undertaking this scenic and varied route.

Please support us by placing an order today! Each sale helps fund our work to protect, promote and enhance Hertfordshire’s countryside.

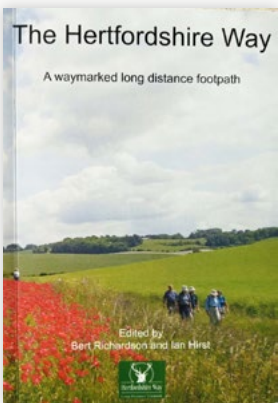

Heavy Cotton Tote Bag

£4 each

Our heavy cotton tote bags have our logo on a plain background on one side, and the logo with our colourful 'swoosh' on the other side.

Each bag is approximately 36 x 41 cm

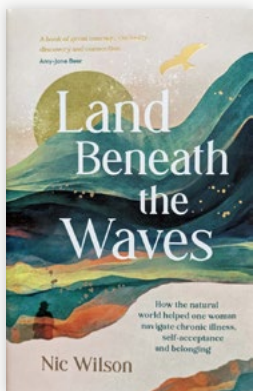

The Hertfordshire Way

The most up-to-date edition of the essential guidebook to The Hertfordshire Way (third edition published in 2017). Edited by Bert Richardson and Ian Hirst, this is the official guide to the 195 mile waymarked footpath.

The route is fully waymarked and this guidebook makes it easy to follow. The book has route maps and guidance notes, as well as contextual information about points of interest along the way, including notes on history, architecture, wildlife, waterways, folklore, and famous local residents.

Land Beneath the Waves

Land Beneath the Waves by local author Nic Wilson is a moving and revealing memoir of living with chronic illness and how our relationship with the natural world can help. This book inspires us to develop a meaningful bond with our local natural spaces and landscapes, illuminating a hopeful path for a better future.
